
For facilitators, trainers and learning and development professionals

Virtual facilitation

PROGRAMME OUTLINE:

Facilitation and training is increasingly shifting from traditional face-to-face delivery models to being delivered in a virtual format. For experienced facilitators, trainers and L&D professionals, the transition from being physically in the room with participants can be a challenge, especially as there is a common misconception that it's not possible to effectively develop certain skills, particularly behavioural, using the virtual format.

This programme focuses on developing the skills and confidence required to successfully make the transition from face-to-face to virtual delivery of facilitation, training and L&D activities.

The module takes place over 2 sessions. In Session 1 participants learn the theory and practical skills required to work virtually. In Session 2 participants practice and get feedback on delivering a pre-designed virtual mini session.

Participants will:

- Understand the differences between facilitating in the “face-to-face” and “virtual” formats
- Understand the key principles and best practices for delivering really effective virtual facilitation
- Learn the functions for effectively facilitating a session:
 - Putting participants at ease
 - Running a breakout session
 - Using polling
 - Managing chat windows
 - Sharing documents
 - Using video
 - Using annotation tools
 - Organising your screen
 - Giving clear instructions
- Learn techniques for troubleshooting during a session
 - Technical problems
 - Multiple conversations
 - Lack of responses

PROGRAMME FORMAT & DURATION:

2 x 120-minute sessions

Run as a virtual session – participants can join from any location
